INTRODUCTION

The Open Knowledge Foundation Switzerland (Opendata.ch) and the Open Knowledge Foundation are delighted to welcome you to the 2013 Open Knowledge Conference (OKCon) in Geneva, Switzerland on 16th-19th September. OKCon is the world's leading open data and open knowledge conference, running since 2005.

Our theme for OKCon 2013 is Open Data – Broad, Deep Connected. In the last few years we have seen government open data initiatives grow and become important in areas such as research, culture and international development. OKCon will explore how open data is not only expanding geographically but also touching new sectors and new areas. It will focus on how we can coordinate and strengthen public policy around the world to support a truly global and interconnected ecosystem of open data.

OKCon 2013 is jointly organized by the Open Knowledge Foundation Switzerland (Opendata.ch) and the Open Knowledge Foundation with the support of the Swiss Government and Lift Events as the production partner.

OKCON PARTNERS

Opendata.ch, Open Knowledge Foundation and Lift wish to express their sincere thanks to all those who have made this event possible through their in-kind and financial contributions.

TOPICS

OPEN DATA, GOVERNMENT AND GOVERNANCE

Many governments around the world are opening up data and publishing open data on regional, national and international portals. But how do we ensure that opening up data is a commitment for the long term, and that open data is fully embedded into processes and policies? We also welcome demonstrations of the practical uses of open knowledge within governments, discuss the current challenges to achieving global transparency, and the fundamental role of civic society.

OPEN DEVELOPMENT AND SUSTAINABILITY

Open access to data, information and knowledge has a powerful role to play in global development and sustainability. It gives us the opportunity to build inclusive ecosystems to help our society to adapt and change to avoid environmental collapse and to guarantee the well-being of the current and future generations. We'll explore how we can engage with key development challenges, from addressing chronic poverty, to providing access to health care and addressing climate change with the help of open data and knowledge.

OPEN SCIENCE AND RESEARCH

Science is opening up in ways not imagined 25 years ago. Citizens are increasingly involved in the scientific process, data and software resulting from research are more and more shared, and open access to the publications resulting from research is profoundly influencing the landscape of scientific publishing, while in turn opening up avenues for new innovative research. We look forward to discussing the impact of these changes for researchers and scientists.

TECHNOLOGY, TOOLS AND BUSINESS

Leveraging open data from public, research and commercial sources to build innovative applications, technologies and services businesses serving both supply and demand for open data. This series of seminars and discussions is aimed at people and organisations looking to build viable revenue streams from consulting services and technical deployments for information suppliers, or creating custom applications and services derived from open data.

EVIDENCE AND STORIES

Whether it's for monitoring trends, evaluating impact or dispelling myths, open data is a key ingredient on the path to evidence. We are examining the role of open data in evidence-based policy making, data-driven campaigns and advocacy, data journalism and visualisation and discover how much and how clearly we can communicate illuminating an argument and telling a story with data.

OPEN CULTURE

How can we build a global cultural commons that enables the widest possible re-use and access to our shared cultural heritage? These sessions will address how we can strengthen the existing networks of individuals, organisations and institutions working towards a global cultural commons and explore tools and methods for enabling re-use of open cultural heritage content and data on the web.

OPEN SWITZERLAND

A session brimming with enthusiasm: Switzerland is officially joining the Open Government Data movement at the Open Knowledge Conference 2013! With the launch of the Federal Data Portal and a wide range of activities both in the public and private sector Switzerland is making progress every day, complementing its revered direct democracy with the transparency of open data. This session demonstrates and comments on this development.
